DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE Intelligence Producers Council Washington, D.C. 20505

25X1

25X1

FROM:	Members, Intelligence Producers Council	25)
,	Chief, Intelligence Producers Council Staff
SUBJECT:	Discontinuance of the Term "LITINT" in IPC Products
1988, on intell [.]	telligence Producers Council (IPC) Staff report, dated 14 June igence gaps relative to the FY 1988 National Intelligence ade reference to the term LITINT (intelligence from literature) discipline.	25)
term LITINT, we Community elemen	ponse to some concern within the Community about our use of the have conferred with the HUMINT Committee and with other nts. Our conclusion is that the term "open source"
(representing b intelligence da "open source" is it as a major co	roadcast and print media) is more reflective of the types of ta we are accounting for in our reports. Moreover, the term s readily accepted, and the Intelligence Community recognizes ontributor of intelligence data. Furthermore, we like the
(representing b intelligence da "open source" is it as a major co	roadcast and print media) is more reflective of the types of ta we are accounting for in our reports. Moreover, the term s readily accepted, and the Intelligence Community recognizes	25.
(representing by intelligence da l'open source is it as a major continued and the state of the s	roadcast and print media) is more reflective of the types of ta we are accounting for in our reports. Moreover, the term is readily accepted, and the Intelligence Community recognizes ontributor of intelligence data. Furthermore, we, like the e, regard "open source" as an established subcategory of id any ambiguity in the future, the IPC Staff willwhere the term "open source" in its surveys, reports, and analyses	,
(representing by intelligence da l'open source is it as a major continued and the state of the s	roadcast and print media) is more reflective of the types of ta we are accounting for in our reports. Moreover, the term is readily accepted, and the Intelligence Community recognizes contributor of intelligence data. Furthermore, we, like the e, regard "open source" as an established subcategory of intelligence data.	,
(representing brintelligence damentelligence damentelligence damentelligence damentelligence de la major constant de la major constant de la major de	roadcast and print media) is more reflective of the types of ta we are accounting for in our reports. Moreover, the term is readily accepted, and the Intelligence Community recognizes ontributor of intelligence data. Furthermore, we, like the e, regard "open source" as an established subcategory of id any ambiguity in the future, the IPC Staff willwhere the term "open source" in its surveys, reports, and analyses	, ,
(representing by intelligence da l'open source is it as a major continued and the state of the s	roadcast and print media) is more reflective of the types of ta we are accounting for in our reports. Moreover, the term is readily accepted, and the Intelligence Community recognizes ontributor of intelligence data. Furthermore, we, like the e, regard "open source" as an established subcategory of id any ambiguity in the future, the IPC Staff willwhere the term "open source" in its surveys, reports, and analyses	,
(representing by intelligence da l'open source is it as a major continued and the state of the s	roadcast and print media) is more reflective of the types of ta we are accounting for in our reports. Moreover, the term is readily accepted, and the Intelligence Community recognizes ontributor of intelligence data. Furthermore, we, like the e, regard "open source" as an established subcategory of id any ambiguity in the future, the IPC Staff willwhere the term "open source" in its surveys, reports, and analyses	25) 25)

STAT

STAT

STAT

STAT